In 1850, in this small factory, was founded the business that now produces Cinco, the largest selling cigar in America.

O. EISENLOHR CIGAR MANUFACTURER

LONG before the Civil War in a tiny shop in Philadelphia, William Eisenlohr founded the great business which today produces hundreds of millions of Cinco cigars annually.

For eleven years past Cinco has been millions oversold. Offers of new business from all parts of the world have had to be declined, in spite of the building of one new factory after another.

For eleven years the same distributors have absorbed every increase in production.

Never has production been allowed to increase too fast, because it has been the unalterable policy that the merit of the product must be maintained at any cost. During 70 years, the character of Eisenlohr's cigars has never been changed, except for the better.

Recent additions to production facilities, plans for which have been under way for several years, now make it possible to intensify distribution of this famous cigar in this territory. And every Cinco you smoke will be exactly like the thousands smoked elsewhere every day.

You will now find the famous Cinco cigar on retail counters everywhere. Smoke a Cinco today and learn why millions of smokers say "Stick to Cinco—it's safe."
